GERMANY SEEKING TO CRUSH POLAND, SAYS PADEREWSKI

Victory Unattainable For Them In West, Hoped For In East, He Avers

SITUATION GRAVE

Polish Forces Are Faced On All Fronts By Armed Foes

STRIFE IN SILESIA

Warsaw Reports Tell Of Attacks On Cities By German Troops

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, September 5.—M. Paderewski, President of Poland, in the course of an interview declared that the Germans were now seeking to gain a victory on the eastern front which had been unattainable in the west. He pointed out that in Upper Silesia, East Prussia and Lithuania, along the Bolshevik front, in the vicinity of Minsk and along the Ukrainian front the Polish armies were forced to face armed enemies. Where these enemies were not Germans they were aided by the Germans who were advancing Bolshevism to embarrass Poland, whose government with limited supplies was finding the situation desperate. The attempt by Germany to crush Poland would not succeed if Poland got speedy succor, but until the treaty with Germany was ratified they would not be able to get the foreign troops necessary to steady the situation. In the Baltic States of Russia the Germans were fomenting disorder assisting the Bolsheviks. On all sides, concluded M. Paderewski, Poland is forced to face the new war which Germany is waging against the Allied cause. Germany is determined to conquer Russia at any cost and is making every effort to hamper us and ruin our reputation throughout the world.

London, September 5.—The latest Polish reports from Warsaw state that the insurgents in Upper Silesia have blown up the railway bridge at Tarnowice and destroyed telegraphic and telephonic communication in the district of Tarnowice. Machineguns and armored cars were used and the fighting lasted three hours, when the Germans withdrew after suffering losses. German aeroplane attacks are reported on various towns. Three aeroplanes machine-gunned the main street in one place, killing five and wounding 29 persons.

Ruthless Submarine Warfare Says Tirpitz In Memoirs, Only Chance Germany Had

Reviews Diplomatic Blunders And Goes Back To Haldane's Visit; Laments Failure To Send High Seas Fleet Into Battle

(Reuter's Service)

London, September 7.—The Sunday Times publishes extracts from the memoirs of Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, who declares that he alone in Germany realised Great Britain's desire to crush Germany, and that but for the interference of the German politicians he would have concentrated all Germany's energies against Great Britain. He maintains that unrestricted submarine warfare should have been prosecuted ruthlessly to the end as the only weapon which could have saved Germany from defeat. He declares that the prestige of the British navy robbed Germany's leaders of their courage at the beginning of the war when the German navy had a prospect of victory. He laments that he was denied opportunity of accompanying the fleet to the battle of Jutland which, he asserts, if it had been fought to a finish would have put a different face on the history of the world.

Has Praise For Haldane
Discussing the blunders of German diplomacy Admiral von Tirpitz declares that the despatch of the Panther to Agadir, for which Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter was chiefly responsible, was a grave blunder which inflicted a severe blow to German prestige. To counteract this Admiral von Tirpitz says he insisted on the introduction of the Naval Supplementary Bill, the announcement of which in the Kaiser's speech of February 7, 1912, led to Lord Haldane's visit to Berlin. Admiral von Tirpitz lengthily expatiates on Lord Haldane's cleverness as a negotiator, dazzling the Kaiser with the prospects of a great African empire, while "merely claiming the Cape to Cairo railway as England's share." "That," he remarks, "meant Africa for England." Criticises Bethmann-Hollweg

Admiral von Tirpitz says that Lord Haldane, without giving an equivalent, pocketed Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg's surrender of the Naval Supplementary Bill and constantly evaded the vital point of agreement which would secure England's neutrality in the event of war. He reproaches the German Staff with underestimating the British army even as late as the autumn of 1918. He says that he was constantly thwarted in his design of concentrating his energies on cutting the British communications by risking the High Seas fleet in battle in order to seize the Channel ports. He says that Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, who was infatuated with the idea of effecting an understanding with Great Britain, once remarked that the war against England was only a passing thunderstorm and that he therefore wished to handle England gently in actual war operations. Bethmann-Hollweg, says Admiral von Tirpitz, failed to realise that England having entered the war was deliberately bent on winning it. The leading circles in Germany were quite ignorant of the meaning of sea power and of the bitter fate which threatened Germany if she were given off the seas. Admiral von Tirpitz laments the lost opportunity not merely of holding up traffic in the Channel with artillery posted on Cape Gris Nez, but of subjecting London to bombardment from Cape Gris Nez which, he declared would have been far more effective than the bombardment of Paris in 1918. He says that Bethmann-Hollweg refused to risk the fleet in battle because he listened to Herr Ballin, held that the fleet should be preserved intact until the conclusion of

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Harbin, September 6.—It is reported that Irkutsk is living through a serious economic crisis, largely due to the recent strike on the Chinese Eastern Railway, when all transport of bread from the east was suspended, and also the refusal of Manchuria to accept Siberian notes, which besides making previous contracts null and void, renders new contracts impossible.

Americans Enrolled In Language School Of British Chamber

10,000 Meet Here To Express Protests On Japanese Issues

Not wishing to be outdone by the petitioners in Peking and Tientsin in their demands for the preservation of Shantung, Shanghai students, merchants and agitators held a mass meeting at the Public Recreation Grounds, West Gate, Sunday afternoon. Eighty organisations, represented by 10,000 or more individuals, attended. The meeting decided to send petitioners to Peking to join with those in Peking and Tientsin in urging refusal to sign the German treaty of peace until the Shantung rights are restored to China and in further advocating refusal to deal directly with Japan on the Shantung question; abrogation of the 21 demands, the arms alliance, the Kiao-shan and Tsi-shan Railway treaties and the note exchanged on the Kiao-Tsi line, and asking punishment of Generals Chang Shu-yuen, Tsuchun of Shantung and General Ma Liang, Military Commissioner of Tsinanfu.

Besides dealing with the Shantung question, the meeting also passed resolutions to demand the abolition of the Border Defense Bureau, the dissolution of the An Fu Club, the punishment of Generals Tuan Chi-jui and Hsu Shu-cheng, the adoption by Peking of methods of open diplomacy, the abolition of all regulations aimed to muzzle the press and to oppose the appointment of Mr. Wang Yi-tang as the Northern peace delegate.

On account of the indisposition of Mr. Ho Pao-jen, president of the Students' Union, Mr. Wang Tsi-act as chairman. The meeting was held only after some difficulty. When the crowd arrived at 3 o'clock, a detachment of police was on guard at the gate of the recreation ground, which was locked. Several attempted to enter, but were told by the officer in charge that no previous notice had been given to the police for the holding of the meeting and that if representatives were elected to see the Chief of Police, the authorities might consent to the meeting.

Accordingly six representatives were elected and authorised to speak for the crowd. They were received by the secretary of the chief and a few others. The officers stated that only Sunday morning they had received a letter sent by mail to say a meeting would be held and asking that the use of the Recreation Grounds be permitted. But, according to the authorities, the letter bore no signature of any responsible person.

The representatives were then asked to sign an official letter addressed to the police and the meeting was allowed.

VIENNA ASSEMBLY VOTES FOR SIGNING OF PEACE TREATY

Protest German-Austria's Self-Determination Rights Are Ignored

RENNER TO LEAVE

Chancellor Says Allies Hold Full Control Of Economic Situation

BERLIN IS HEARD

Reply Is Made To Allied Threat Of Further Occupations

(Reuter's Service)

Copenhagen, September 7.—A Vienna telegram states that the National Assembly unanimously passed a resolution protesting against "the violation by the peace terms of German-Austria's right of self-determination" and by 97 votes to 23 charged Dr. Renner to sign the treaty.

Chancellor To Leave

Vienna, Sept. 6.—Dr. Renner, the Austrian Chancellor, in an interview said that he was returning to St. Germain on Sunday to sign the treaty later. This shows that Dr. Renner is convinced that the Austrian Assembly will accept the treaty.

Renner Issues Statement

Vienna, September 5.—Dr. Renner, the Austrian Chancellor, has issued a statement acknowledging that every page of the peace treaty exhibits a careful endeavor on the part of the conference to put the confused situation in tolerable order. He enlarges however on the sacrifices exacted by the treaty and says that the Austrians are subjected to complete economic domination by the Allied Powers. He expresses the opinion that this would be bearable if they knew whether the League of Nations would exist and be so organized that it would be in a position to be just. He adds that the existence and working of the League of Nations is for Austria an essential condition of the treaty.

Germans Send Reply

Berlin, September 5.—The German reply to the Supreme Council's note threatening fresh territorial occupations on the Rhine unless Germany rescinded the article in the new German constitution providing for Austrian representation on the Imperial Council says that Germany is unable to maintain its attitude on this question. "This, however," the German Government says, "does not necessitate an alteration of the German imperial constitution. If the Allies, in case their demands are rejected extend their occupation, the German Government will regard such a step as a deplorable act of violence."

Note Is Called Vague

London, September 5.—The German reply is regarded in London as vague and indefinite.

Omsk Minister Holds View Recognition Will Be Given

Kolchak Official Tells Of Conference Attended By Mr. Morris, Representing President Wilson

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Harbin, September 8.—According to reports from Omsk, M. Soukine, Foreign Minister of the Kolchak Government, interviewed by a representative of the Russian Telegraph Agency said that the exchange of notes between the Supreme Ruler and the five Great Powers at the end of May and the beginning of June last was a turning point in Russian foreign policy.

America, who till then, he said, had remained a passive neutral as regards assisting Russia, had decided to join in helping to improve conditions in Russia. America's new attitude, M. Soukine proceeded, was due to a change of social opinion in the United States, where people grew to understand the real meaning of Bolshevism when it had worked its way into their country.

Step Toward Recognition
The Minister went on to point out that the exchange of notes was the first step towards the recognition of the Omsk Government as the Government of All-Russia. Such recognition, however, he said, with its attendant liabilities could only be accorded after detailed consideration of a general plan of assistance.

Mr. Morris, the United States Ambassador at Tokyo, was sent to Omsk with that object, with instructions from President Wilson. Mr. Morris together with the other Allied representatives attended the meetings of a conference presided over by M. Soukine, at which a number of specialists were present. The conference lasted three weeks and its results might be considered as most important. On its conclusion Mr. Morris and the other Allied representatives sent their home governments reports which were highly satisfactory from the standpoint of Russia's national interests.

The principal questions discussed, the Minister explained, were (1) the railway situation, including the technical and financial sides, as well as the problem of guarding; (2) the supply by the Allies before the winter of munitions and technical equipment for the army; and (3) economic assistance including the supply of primary necessities for the population. Sanction is Awaited.

After dealing with the above questions, M. Soukine went on, in order to carry out this program with the least inconvenience to each of the Allied Powers, it was found to be necessary to recognize Admiral Kolchak's Government. The results of the conference satisfied the Kolchak Government of the sincere desire of the Allied Powers to find means of assisting Russia. Nevertheless, the program cannot yet be considered final without the sanction of the Allied Governments.

The Minister further stated that independently of those negotiations Great Britain, America and Japan were continuing to supply the Russian army with war material. Thanks to this help General Yudenich was able to develop his operations against Petrograd.

In conclusion M. Soukine remarked that Omsk would shortly witness the arrival of representatives of the Czech-Slovak Republic, with which the Omsk Government counted on establishing a complete agreement which would strengthen the solidarity of the Slavs. At present the Czechs and Poles were greatly assisting Russia by guarding the railway and opposing the Bolshevik gangs in the rear of the army.

Report Religious Movement Is Spreading Through Russia

Harbin, September 8.—The Archbishop Neutor, who left Moscow at the end of 1918, has arrived in Omsk after nearly nine months traveling via Suez. He told a representative of the Russian Telegraph Agency that the Bolsheviks were only retaining their power by means of terror, with the help of highly paid Chinese, Letts and Magyars.

A great reaction as regards religious feeling, he said, was spreading all over Russia. The few churches that remained intact were thronged with workmen and peasants who went there to pray. This new movement, the Archbishop said, was greatly alarming the Bolsheviks, who, however, were afraid to interfere, fearing that the consequences might be serious. The Patriarch Tison, who, the Archbishop said, was the most popular man in the whole country, was daily preaching in the Cathedral, in spite of the threats of the Commissaries, who would have him arrested, if they were not afraid of meeting armed opposition. The Archbishop added that the priests were everywhere declared to be counter-revolutionary and were being mercilessly prosecuted.

EXPECT HARBIN EPIDEMIC WILL BE OVER THIS MONTH

Plague Prevention Head Says
Mid-September Should See
Normal Conditions Again

A report from Dr. Wu Lien-teh, of the North Manchurian Plague Prevention Service, dated September 1, expresses the belief that the cholera epidemic at Harbin will be completely at an end by the middle of this month.

During the last five days of August the falling off in mortality was most marked and on the last day of the month the Plague Prevention Hospital had but 47 patients, as compared with 146 in one day when the epidemic was at its height. The more recent cases too have been observed to be of milder character.

The total mortality among Chinese in all parts of Harbin during three weeks through which the disease was epidemic is reported as 3,567. Among Russian and Japanese residents the deaths were in the neighborhood of 240 and 60 respectively. The Plague Prevention Hospital between August 5 and 31 admitted 1,821 patients, with a mortality of 263, or 14.5 percent, a significant indication of the effectiveness of the saline infusion treatment.

The plague prevention officials express grateful thanks to the general community of Harbin for its support and particularly mention the American Red Cross and the British community, headed by Consul H. B. Sly, C. M. G., and Mr. P. H. Hilliard, who have contributed a considerable sum towards immediate expenses.

Establish Bureau At Tsinan
Word from Tsinan, Shantung, tells of the opening of an epidemic prevention bureau in that place for the purpose of checking the spread of cholera and engaging in a campaign of sanitary education. The bureau was opened on August 28 by Civil Governor Chu Yingkwang in the presence of Tuchen Chang Shou-yuan. Governor Chu addressed the staff of the bureau on the importance of the work to be taken up and thanked the members of the staff for the work they had already done.

'Polly With A Past'

"Polly with a Past" in order to save a lovesick swain took upon herself the rather naughty name of "Paulette Baddy", before the second act had gone far the name had become "Bardie", only a moment later it was "Bade" with a distinct accent on the final E and then when Uncle Tim Frawley came on the scene he insisted upon calling "Paulette Body"; so you see, the name of "Polly with a Past" varied a lot, and as a matter of fact so did the show. I was on the whole disappointed with the production. I expected a good sex, nicely cooked and easily digested; as a matter of fact it was of the type patronised by curates, that is good in parts.

"Polly with a Past" is a ripping good farcical comedy, but it requires plenty of the best acting and very naturally it needs, like all shows, to go with a snap that only a sureness of lines can carry. It was in the first act that the impression took root that lines were illusive, and I fancy this was due to the fact that there had been a shuffling of the parts very near the last moment.

Not one of the unpleasant things that I have to say about the production has anything whatever to do with Miss Vera Doria, who took the name part. She had to make rapid transitions from being the demure country maid to that of a regular "vamp" with a pronounced French accent. She was excellent from start to finish and never once lost her grip upon the audience. She made Polly a really clever study and I can well imagine that when the rest of the company get to nearer quarters with their words the piece will prove to be one of the best of the repertoire.

Another player who calls for special mention is Mr. Albert Morrison, who in the part of "Richardson" worked like a nigger to save the show. He put in every bit of his boundless experience to race along that somewhat slow first scene, and much of the success that attended it is due to him.

Homer Barton as usual was safe with his little character study, and the same can be said of Messrs. Frawley, Fargoon, and Hildebrand. Vere Mathews made quite a hit with his dude part, Bob Barker. Taylor Graves had a big part to sustain and, much as I like his work, I do not think that he was too well cast as Rex Van Zile.

Miss Fontaine was again very acceptable in the part of Myrtle Davis and convincing work was supplied by Miss Fletcher and Miss Virden.

The two scenes that backed the production call for a special word of praise. In the first act some daring color schemes were presented, but they were so well arranged that the whole effect was delightful. This is not the first time that the settings of Frawley's productions have been admired. I believe Mr. Gordon Blyth is responsible for this department of all the shows, and he is to be congratulated upon the excellent effects that he gets. Tonight "Polly with a Past" will be repeated.

HONGKONG YARN MARKET FEELS DROP IN PRICES

Entire Absence Of Buyers Is Reported Following Slump
Of Past Fortnight

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Hongkong, September 8.—The Polishwalla Kotewall says "During the past fortnight there has been a heavy drop in prices of yarn in Bombay. Our market has been affected. There is an entire absence of buyers; indeed, fearing a further decline buyers are trying their utmost to get rid of their holding at a reduction of from ten to fifteen dollars per bale. On the other hand importers will not free sellers owing to the most unfavorable and greatly fluctuating exchange on India, and they are not inclined to press down the market by forcing sales."

In the circumstances the market closed very quiet with a drooping tendency. Total sales amounted to 6,000 bales, unsold stock 5,000 bales, uncleared 25,000 bales.

TELLS BIG REDUCTION MADE IN BRITISH NAVY

Speaker Says That Of 400,000 Men Serving At Time Of Armistice, 187,000 Remain

(Reuter's Service)
London, September 5.—Speaking at Pontefract today on the eve of polling for the bye election Dr. Macnamara, Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty said that the active service strength of the navy had been reduced from 400,000 men on armistice day to 187,000 today. Five hundred and eighty four naval craft to be constructed had been cancelled, saving the country nearly 45,000,000 sterling. Ninety-eight older ships had been sold and 1,500 trawlers and drifters had been repaired, reconditioned and returned to their proper vocations. The daily expenditure from naval votes today was just half what it was on armistice day, but the improved pay and pensions of officers and men would always and rightly be a permanent charge.

BETRAYER OF CAVELL SENTENCED TO DEATH

Quien Asserts Innocence At
Conclusion Of Speech
Of His Counsel

(Reuter's Service)
Paris, September 5.—The hearing of evidence in the Cavell case has been concluded. The prosecutor asked for the accused conviction for espionage and the death penalty. The feature of the later proceedings was a statement which Mayar, a German secret police agent made to the British military attaché at the Hague and which was accepted as evidence. Mayar declared that he knew accused well and that the prosecution of Nurse Cavell was conducted by two men called Bergeil and Plinkhoff. The former received the iron cross for the manner in which he had conducted the case. He is now police commissioner at Dusseldorf. Plinkhoff also received the iron cross.

Mayar had a remarkable career. He was a waiter in London from 1880 to 1884, then he served three years in a German infantry regiment. Next he was employed by a British firm at Zanzibar whence he drifted to Lucknow and Baroda, where he was caterer to the court in 1890. He then went to Kapurthala where he remained 13 years. He became a courier of Cook's tourist agency, among those employing him being Lord Iveagh at the Delhi Durbar. Sir Ernest Cassel in North Africa, and Colonel House in Russia. He joined the German political police in 1914 and was immediately despatched to Bern to pretend that he was a runaway clerk from German headquarters and make a statement to the British military attaché that a German offensive was being prepared in the Solsons sector. This he did, receiving 500 marks for his report.

The Court, after deliberating for 50 minutes, unanimously found accused guilty of high treason and he was sentenced to death, four judges voting for, and three against. Quien asserted his innocence at the conclusion of his counsel's speech and again when he was condemned. Six out of the seven judges signed a recommendation for mercy.

MOHAMMEDAN BODIES IN SESSION IN PEKING

Letter Attacking General Ma
Leads To Suspension Of Association

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, September 5.—A meeting of the Mohammedan Association of Peking was held yesterday afternoon. General Ma Lung-piao, who presided, asked the meeting who had written a letter to the Yi Shih Pao concerning General Ma Liang. There was no reply and General Ma Lung-piao then said that he must suspend the Association, for if none of the members had written the letter, someone outside the association had used its name to attack General Ma Liang, which could not be allowed. It is said that the suspension of this Association is due to the fact that the Mohammedans in Kansu and Sinkiang have shown irritation at the conduct of General Ma Liang and the military in Peking fear that similar action may be taken by the Mohammedans in Peking.

London, September 6.—Sir Horace Byatt, Administrator of the former German East Africa, is leaving England shortly for Bar es Salaam, which will be the headquarters of the government. All is going on smoothly in the country. The old German native army has melted away, the Askaris having returned to their villages. There are only a few German settlers left, the majority having been repatriated. There is no native problem, for the inhabitants have taken kindly to their new rulers. The damaged railways have been repaired and are working to Lake Tanganyika. The most urgent need is the resumption of shipping both coastwise and to Europe.

Farewells Are Given To Pershing At Brest

American Commander Escorted To Transport Leviathan
By Marshal Foch

(American Press Wireless)
Paris, Sept. 3. (Press from Lyons, France).—General Pershing embarked on board the transport Leviathan at Brest on Monday morning. The American Commander-in-Chief arrived at Brest from Paris at 8:30 and was received at the station by Marshal Foch, who motored from his estate in Brittany. The two commanders heartily shook hands. M. Marlin, prefect, M. Brinar, sub-prefect, and the mayor of Brest were presented to General Pershing.

The General inspected the guard of honor furnished by the 19th French infantry and then stepped aboard a gunboat which took him out to the Leviathan lying in the roadstead. As the gunboat drew away from the wharf the band played the Marseillaise and the Star Spangled Banner while the crowd of spectators went into deafening cheers and all the warships in the harbor fired salutes. The crews who manned the ships cheered loudly. All the authorities accompanied General Pershing to the Leviathan.

ASIATIC ORGANISATIONS IN SESSION IN LONDON

Sections For Discussion Of Near-Eastern, Indian And Far-Eastern Subjects Formed

(Reuters Service) London, September 4.—The members of the Royal Asiatic Society, Societe Asiatique, American Oriental Society and Societa Orientale di Roma are holding a four days' joint session in London to discuss Oriental research.

Sir Charles Lyall welcomed the visitors. The numerous papers to be read necessitated the formation of separate sections for the Near-Eastern, Indian and Far-Eastern subjects. Sir Charles Lyall said that they aimed at concerting plans for the advancement of archaeological research among the Allies. The changes wrought by the war would enable scientific research to pursue its work in large tracts of territory hitherto closed. He referred to the entry of India as a nation into the field of politics and said that it was essential that a thorough endeavor should be made to understand the Indian mind, thought and inspiration.

Professor Clay, Professor of Assyriology at Yale University described the activities of American Assyriologists. He said that the American School of Oriental Research in Palestine would shortly reopen on a more extensive scale than before the war. He hoped it would work in close co-operation with the larger and more important school contemplated by British scientists.

Professor Cordier read a paper on the great development in the knowledge of Chinese art during the past twenty years and the influence of Buddhism on Chinese art.

(Reuters Service)

London, September 6.—The Daily Mail states that Gen. Sir Edmund Allenby is returning to England on the ninth instant, adding "Apparently no arrangements for a public welcome have been made. This omission must be quickly corrected."

The Times in a leading article says that it is understood that General Allenby is returning to urge that the Syrian mandate be entrusted to France. The Times declares that it is believed in some quarters that Gen. Allenby intends to resign if his recommendation is not accepted.

The Times' Cairo correspondent telegraphs that the authorities were aware for some time that attempts might be made on the lives of the Sultan, General Allenby and the Premier.

Stop Dangerous Fire By Quick Action

Blaze In Silk Godown Checked By Brigade; Sinza Road Shops Burn

Little damage was done by a dangerous fire Sunday night at Messrs. Liddell's silk godown, Foochow Road, where contents valued at approximately Tis. 1,000,000 were stored. The outbreak was attacked in its infancy and nipped in the bud. Two theories were advanced as to the cause of the conflagration. One was that a lighted cigarette had been carelessly tossed about, while the other was that electric wires had become crossed.

Smoke was found to be issuing from the second and third floors of the western portion of the godown when the Central Division of the Fire Brigade arrived. The smoke was thick and the members of the division fought the flame under most difficult conditions. The floor on the southwest corner was completely burned through, but the damage was slight in consideration of the property at risk.

Three shops were badly damaged when fire broke out Sunday morning at 1690-1 Sinza Road, a candle and cigarette shop. The inflammability of the contents of the shops, which contained candles, kerosene and paper, made the buildings burn with remarkable fierceness, but the flames were finally brought under control by the combined efforts of the Sinza and Central divisions.

American Cotton Expert Joins Nanking University

Prof. J. B. Griffing Engaged To Head Agriculture Department In Program To Develop China's Cotton Industry

With the employment past week of Professor J. B. Griffing, head of the Agricultural department of Arizona State Normal school, as cotton specialist for Nanking University, the second important step in the program to revolutionize China's great cotton industry has been taken, according to representative Shanghai mill operators. The first step was the arrival of the O. F. Cook party of United States Department of Agriculture experts who are now at work investigating the cotton situation throughout China.

Professor Griffing will begin his work at Nanking in January. Besides his position as instructor of agriculture in Arizona he is head of the Griffing Cotton Company of Tempe, Arizona, which has planted a great section of land to Pima strain of Egyptian cotton, developed largely by Professor Griffing's efforts. Egyptian cotton is noted for its long fibre and long, dried cotton brings double the price that short cotton does. The Pima variety, discovered as a mutation or odd variety soon after the Egyptian species was brought to America eighteen years ago, has now been developed to the point where it brings five cents more a pound than any other. That it could be introduced into China is not regarded as probable, but other varieties as fruitful here as the Pima strain in America are believed to be quite within the range of discovery or development and it is for that purpose largely that Professor Griffing has been asked to take charge of cotton research at Nanking.

Mr. O. F. Cook and his assistant, Mr. H. F. Loomis, in charge of the cotton improvement work of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, are devoting much of their time in China to examination of the twenty-eight cotton experiments started this year in different parts of China under direction of Professor Reiser of Nanking, dean of the department of Agriculture. These experiments, which are with various strains of American and other foreign seed as well as with transplanted varieties of Chinese cotton are in widely scattered districts. Those near Shanghai and Nanking, according to Mr. Cook, have not had the best of conditions this year, the season being too wet. The scientists, however, are greatly interested and are hoping for some discoveries before the close of their trip, which will be some time next month. Among other things they are interested in insect pests that attack the plant in these parts.

Professor Griffing will accompany the Cook party on the investigation trip. His coming was planned in conjunction with them but at the last moment he was delayed by sickness in his family. He has now made arrangements to return to America in a few weeks in order to wind up his affairs in cotton development there and will return here with his family as soon as possible.

The cotton experts are too new in their investigation of Chinese conditions to express opinions as to what may be done. They have found that Chinese cotton is regularly of the short varieties, much of it in these parts is being grown on land better suited to rice, which requires more water than cotton does. There appears to be considerable land too, in this region of China, which because it is not wet enough for rice is not being cultivated at all. This land they are sure could be cultivated in cotton to advantage.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable. The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria.

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"Your preparation known as Castoria I have used for years in children's complaints and I have found nothing better."
JOHN J. LEPPA, M. D., Cleveland, Ohio.

"I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm."
EDWARD FARRIS, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Your Castoria is a meritorious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies."
VICTOR H. COPPEMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."
J. A. PARKER, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

Chinese Hospitals Cup Competition

The Chinese hospitals cup competition under the auspices of "B" Co., British, S.V.C., took place on the Rifle Range Saturday and proved very exciting and interesting. Weather conditions were good, but a tricky 30c wind tried some competitors. The shooting in nearly every case was very close, only one or two points separating most competitors, many making a tie, and so passing to the next round.

The result of the first round follows:

Reeves a bye. In the Semi Finals. Pte. Collico beat Leut. Beytagh. Cpl. Snape beat Cpl. Reeves. Pte. Yamanaka bye. A further draw gave Collico vs. Yamanaka and Snape a bye. This resulted in Collico beating Yamanaka thus leaving Cpl. Snape and Pte. Collico to fight out the final at B Co. rifle meeting in November.

A pool was run in connection with the shoot and realised $23.50 percent of this going to the holder of the winner. The remainder and the entries, 47 at $2, giving a total of some $107 has been equally divided between Shantung Road and Tientsin Road hospitals for Chinese. The entries were somewhat disappointing. As the cause was the Red Cross, a much larger number of competitors should have been seen. Some units were not represented by even a single entry. This is the second charity shoot organised by B. Company on knock-out lines.

OUTCLASS JAPANESE NINE IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

Shanghai Wins By 5-0 Score, Taking Baseball Championship Of Settlement

Outclassing the Japanese in every department of the game, Shanghai had little difficulty in winning the second and deciding game in the series for the championship of the Settlement by a 5-0 score on Sunday afternoon at the Race Course. Some 2,000 spectators saw Verne Clair pitch a no-hit, no-run game. The game was marked by a mixture of good and bad baseball with Clair's pitching as the outstanding feature.

The Japanese were helpless before the Shanghai moundsman. He was in trouble but once and then his infield, which had trembled a few minutes before and dug the hole for Clair, yanked him clear with a snappy double killing. In five of the nine frames the Japanese team went out in order. In the seventh Yoshida singled clearly but Hopkins tore in from center, got the ball on the bounce and shot it to Wilhoit in time to get the runner at first by a foot. It was a remarkable throw. Clair fanned eight and passed two. Thirty men faced Clair in the nine innings.

Shanghai hit Imai safely but four times and Wilhoit made two of the bingles. Cy's triple in the first paved the way for the first run. Wilhoit scoring on Cooper's punt when Kojima, after beautifully blocking the plate, dropped Imai's perfect throw. Shanghai scored four runs in the seventh without a hit. Two of the tallies resulted on a wild pitch.

Koga, the Japanese second baseman, pulled the greatest catch of the game when he got Scott's fly and held the ball after turning a somersault. Ohtsuka played a nice game at short and Imai pitched well. Araki, at first base, handled himself nicely. For Shanghai, Wilhoit was the star. Cy made three beautiful pickups, got two hits and scored as many runs. Clair and French were the others to hit Imai safely.

Every day your complexion

pays toll to dust and wind

The rough, cold winds chap and roughen the skin; dry heated air draws and parches it. The constant strain under which we live—the ceaseless activity of crowded days, the constant effort, the lack of rest—all these things take daily toll of the complexion.

You can protect your complexion from the wear and tear of both summer and winter—can prevent that tired, drawn look from appearing in your face, by giving your skin the care it needs.

It has a wonderfully beautifying effect, and as a base for powder it is so effective that one powdering is sufficient for the whole evening.

This fragrant, dewy cream contains a skin-softening ingredient of great value, one that skin specialists recognize as most efficient in keeping the skin supple, for giving it the transparent freshness everyone admires.

Apply a little Pond's Vanishing Cream when you motor or travel; rub it in lightly. This will protect the sensitive pores from grit and grime, will keep your skin free from that parched feeling that generally follows exposure to dust and dirt.

News Briefs

Popular opinion to the contrary, notwithstanding, yesterday was not the hottest day of the year. At least not according to the meteorological records, which give two previous days of this summer precedence in the matter of mercurial aerobics. On June 7 the stuff in the thermometer broke its moorings and drifted up as far as the figures 97.5. Three days later the guy ropes got severed again and an altitude of but three-tenths of a degree under the 100 mark was registered before the gas gave out. Yesterday the official returns made it 96.4, with a range of 21.1 degrees. So far as can be learned, however, the mercury did not dally much at 76.3.

The American Post Office opened for business yesterday in the new quarters at 19 Whaupoo Road.

Mr. George A. Coleman of the British-American Tobacco Company, who has been stationed in Hongkong for something more than a year, returned to Shanghai Sunday. He expects to become a Shanghai resident once more.

A Chinese shopkeeper's assistant who was charged and arrested by a Chinese Police Constable for riding a bicycle without lights on the Bund Saturday evening, tendered his capior $1 and asked to be released. Yesterday in the Mixed Court he explained that he thought that was the amount of the fine for his offense and that court procedure might be waived. The court boosted the rate to $2 and confiscated the dollar previously paid.

The Offenbach, formerly a German but now an Inter-Allied steamer, arrived in Singapore on September 2, making the seventh of the interned steamers from the Dutch East Indies to reach that port.

Further evidence tending to confirm the sinking of the steamer Hauroto was brought to Hongkong Saturday by the Telemachus, which had picked up a boat spar and the roof of the missing ship's smoking room at a point off the Paracels. The Hauroto was proceeding from Saigon to Hongkong and carried four European officers and one French lady passenger as well as 200 Chinese passengers and a Chinese crew.

A further remand of two weeks was given by the Mixed Court yesterday in the case of the Chinese charged with robbing and shooting a woman on Fokien Road on the night of August 30. A remand was also given in the case of three other men charged with armed robbery and murder.

On account of the indisposition of Magistrate Nieh Yung-ching of the French Mixed Court, Mr. Chen Chia-ching will sit as magistrate for the time being.

Sir Havilland and Lady de Sausmarez returned to Shanghai Sunday afternoon from Weihaiwei.

The offices of the Bureau of Liquidation of the Dutch Asiatische Bank have been removed to the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, 12 The Bund. Posters are now being displayed on the Dutch Asiatische Bank building stating that the premises have been purchased by the Bank of Communications and will be occupied by that bank as soon as necessary alterations have been completed.

Judge Skinner Turner, of the British Supreme Court, and Mrs. Turner have left Shanghai for Dalny.

Eighty-eight sacks of mail matter from the Nippon Maru transhipped from Japan, were delivered to the U.S. Post Office yesterday morning.

A Chinese convicted of selling opium at a shop at 1347 Boone Road was fined $50 by the Mixed Court yesterday. Another Chinese found guilty of allowing opium smoking on certain premises on Kaching Road was ordered to pay a fine of $10 or go to jail for 10 days, while a patron of the place was fined $2.

A coolie found in possession of smuggled opium on the Chinwang-tao jetty was given one month's imprisonment by the Mixed Court yesterday.

A Chinese who stabbed his former sweetheart after an altercation which occurred on August 9 was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment in the Mixed Court yesterday.

The flags at the Shanghai Golf and Country Clubs were flown at half-mast Sunday in memory of Mr. D. B. Murray, of the Union Insurance Society of Canton, who died in Yokohama September 2 following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Murray was formerly stationed in Shanghai and is survived by his widow, who was formerly Miss Mamie Brand of Shanghai, and his parents, who are in England.

Further details reaching Shanghai regarding the accident of a burst steam pipe aboard the Melville Dollar ten days ago, indicate that the six firemen in the engine room at the time met death instantly and that Chief Engineer David Fraser, who was badly scalded about the face, came to his injuries through his desperate efforts to reach the others and save them. The bodies of the five Chinese and of Second Engineer James McRey were taken off at Hongkong, the latter's coffin wrapped in a Canadian flag. The injured, including the chief officer, a man of about 70 years, were taken to the Hongkong Civil hospital.

WHAT MRS. DONN DID

When Her Little Boy Had A Cold.

Mrs. F. Donn, of Woodstock, Ontario, Canada, is one of the thousands of mothers who keep Baby's Own Tablets in the house ready for immediate use when the little ones get out of sorts. She writes: "I have been using Baby's Own Tablets for my children, and find them a very satisfactory medicine. When my little boy had a cold I gave him the Tablets at night, and in the morning he was all right. I give them to the children for constipation, and find their action prompt and gentle."

To mothers everywhere Baby's Own Tablets, the Canadian children's remedy, are a real friend. They are equally harmless and helpful to the youngest infant as to the child of 6 years or more, are a specific for indigestion, colic, diarrhoea, simple fever, make teething easy, promote restful sleep and good appetite, drive out worms. Obtainable from chemists, also at 60 cents the vial, post free, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

has been firm with several periods of slight fluctuation but was steady in all grades at the commencement of this week's auction and remained so throughout the sales.

Singapore Standard 1st Latex Crepe sold steadily at 79 1/2 cents, only slightly off-color lots going for less, whilst 80 1/2 cents was paid for one prime lot in cases, and 80 for another in bulk. There is a two cent advance on the week in this grade, which may be attributed to the general scarcity of Standard Crepe, very few lots being catalogued.

Standard Ribbed Smoked Sheet met with a strong demand at from 75 1/2 to 76 1/2 cents, one lot in cases realising 77 cents. This shows an advance of 2 cents on the week.

One lot of Off Quality Plain Smoked Sheet realised 63 1/2 cents and one lot of Plain Unsmoked Sheet 49 cents.

Off Color Latex and Lower Grades sold to strong demand of about 1/2 to 1 1/2 cents in advance of last week, and buyers appeared to be keener on Blanket Crepe than usual.

At the continuation this morning, there was no change in the market, which finished up firm all-round, especially in Standard 1st Latex Crepe.

IMPARTIAL AND PROGRESSIVE

SHANGHAI, SEPTEMBER 9, 1919

Will The Kaiser Be Tried?

WILL the Kaiser actually be brought to trial? There is much doubt in London. Grave questions are being raised as to the wisdom or desirability of such a trial. There has been a marked change of sentiment on the question in the last few months.

A London Journal has brought together a symposium on the advisability of the trial representing the views of some of Britain's foremost public men. The array of opinion therein revealed is significant. For of the men quoted those who oppose the trial are of much higher rank and prestige and influence than those who favor it.

The arguments put forward center largely on matters of law and of policy. As for the legal aspect it is pointed out that the Kaiser is being tried for breaking a law which did not exist. Granting that he is as the former Emperor directly responsible for the war and that that was a heinous crime against civilization, nevertheless there was no provision in the international code of law making the declaration of war or responsibility for war a crime. We should therefore be trying him for a crime not defined until after its commission, and it is one of the guarantees of Anglo-Saxon law that no man can be tried on an ex post facto charge; that is, no man can be tried for an act in violation of a law which was not on the statute books until after the act was committed.

The question of policy is equally important. To try the Kaiser is to do for him exactly what his strongest supporters would wish for him, to make him a martyr among his own people. No better lease of life could be given the House of Hohenzollern. Today that House and the former Kaiser are in complete discredit with the masses of their own people; the Hohenzollern through all history. To try him, however, and to convict him—and to try him is to convict him—is to wrap him in vestments of romance, to make him a legend in German history, and, by the play of human reactions, to win for him sympathy among his own people, even those who now hate him for heaping ruin on their heads and then deserting them amid the ruins for his own security. And that we do not wish to do, even to satisfy the desire for revenge. For one of the strongest hopes of future peace is a democratic Germany, a Germany purged of its militarist and imperial poisons. And the best assurance of a democratic Germany is the discredited dynasty.

These are the things that farsighted men in England are thinking of, and they may yet decide to allow the Kaiser to remain as he is, in harmless exile, a discredited figure, to live out his life as continued warning to imperial swashbucklers. It would not even be difficult by agreement through the League of Nations to provide for him permanent exile under proper surveillance. Certainly some measure should be taken to ensure that he can never again become a world menace.

A Survey Of France Today

The London Times Paris correspondent last month gave the following general survey of the situation in France:

The French Labor troubles at one moment appeared to contain the germ of trouble of a nature far outside the ordinary claims of a class which is not too well paid, which is badly housed, badly governed, and which suffers perhaps more than the rest of the community from the staggering rise in the cost of living.

For the moment that danger is past, but it would be rash to declare that there is not yet in the near future a possibility of the demands of French labor assuming a definitely political character under the influence of those men in the Socialist Party and in the Syndicalist movement who have during the last few years of the war obtained a steadily more favorable hearing for extremist and occasionally Bolshevik views.

The strikes which have dragged on during the past few weeks have been quite as much a struggle between the political and the "professional" elements in the Labor and Socialist movement as they have been between Labor and Capital. The "professional" element has won the day, and the workers, on the whole, have refused to listen to the advice of the Socialist leaders, who counselled a general strike based largely upon a political platform, and including a demand for a general amnesty for all "political" offenders and a protest against Allied policy towards the Russian "revolution." To men like Jean Longuet, Blanc, Brizon, Ruffins Dugens, the Bolsheviks are the Russian echo of the one and only French Revolution, and any action—even of a negative character—against Bolshevism in Russia and elsewhere is a sin against the traditions of that Revolution.

In Odessa, as at Sebastopol, there were but few French troops, and they had to evacuate both places in circumstances which were, to say the least of it, unfortunate. It was, in fact, very largely due to the forbearance of the Bolsheviks themselves that the evacuation was rendered possible at all. The French Black Sea Fleet mutinied. The Red Flag of the Social Revolution was hoisted, together with the Tricolor, and for a time the control of the fleet passed from the hands of the officers into that of the men.

These events are more or less ancient history, but the French censor, following his instructions, for a long time forbade any public reference to them, and as a result the stories were magnified until they bore not the faintest resemblance to the real happenings, which were in themselves disquieting enough. The final effect of this policy of secrecy was, of course, to lend color to the suggestions of the Socialist propaganda that the Government was committed to a great expedition to Russia; that French troops were being sent there in large numbers to fight an unconstitutional war against Russia—unconstitutional since there has never been any approval by Parliament of any declaration of hostilities against the Bolsheviks. Together with this purely political campaign, propaganda was made which showed, frequently not without cause, that the troops in Russia were badly fed, badly clad, and were in general lacking any intelligent attention from the hands of the authorities.

The Government has done its best, but without much success, to kill this idea that France has a large expeditionary force in the East. The figures of the troops employed there have been given more than once by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, but without effect. The Socialist Press, if it prints them at all, does so in such a manner as to lead any "militant" to believe that they are entirely and intentionally misleading. The agitation carried on throughout the country, on the other hand, has been very fertile. The French are suspicious by nature, and listen to the voice of authority with some scepticism, and are much more likely to heed the suggestions of some travelling agitator than they are to trust to the words of one of their own Ministers on a matter of that sort.

Toulouse Incident
The incidents which occurred at Toulouse recently were directly due to this propaganda. A regiment of heavy artillery had returned but a few days from occupied territory when the rumour of French round among the men that they were going to be sent off to Russia to fight the Bolsheviks. Without much consideration the men poured out of their barracks and started in procession round the town with red flags, maltreating any officer who came their way, singing the Internationale, and declaring in various unmistakable phrases that they would not go to Russia. The townspeople of Toulouse, a noted center of extreme Radical thought, showed quite clearly their disapproval of the attitude of the men, and more than once intervened to protect an officer from their violence, and the whole matter was squashed when a regiment of infantry and some cavalry were drafted in from the neighboring towns and arrested many of the mutineers. There never had been any intention to despatch this regiment of heavy artillery to the East, and the whole disturbance was due to the activity of more or less revolutionary propagandists.

The interesting point about the incident is that it coincided with the strike movement in Paris, just as closely as the strike movement in Paris coincided with the mutinies on the French front at the end of the Nivelle offensive. This is not the only sign which shows that at the back of the whole agitation there are agents whose intentions are certainly not confined to obtaining for the French workmen cheaper living and higher pay. When it is realized that if the advice of the purely political leaders of the Socialist and Labor world had been listened to Germany would have received the last word of the Allies together with the proclamation of a general strike throughout France (including, of course, transport workers), it can be seen which were the forces of disorder likely to result from such a state of affairs.

Opposition Points
Quite apart from the Russian question, the Opposition had, and still has, plenty of shot and shell for a fight against the Government, drawn from the arsenal of Dear Living and bad internal administration. On those two points the Socialists and Labor people are joined by ordinary Radicals, who dread the prospect of the approaching elections, especially if Mr. Clemenceau is going to be the controlling power over them.

These factors combined to make the strike movement dangerous from a political point of view. But working against them was, first of all, the fact that take him all round the French working man is patriotic and realized the special gravity of declaring a general strike at the very moment when the Allies were delivering the Peace terms to the enemy, and secondly the faulty organization of Labor in France.

It may be doubted whether in any other country of the world there exist so many Labor organisations which are not organized in the general interest of Labor. Each trade has its syndicate, each specialised branch of each trade has its syndicate, and so on ad infinitum. These syndicates are grouped in a summary manner under the aegis of the Confederation Generale du Travail, which, however, exerts but little authority over them, and whose influence cannot be compared with that of any single British trade union of any size or standing. Inside the Confederation, or, perhaps, outside it is a better description, there has recently been formed a cartel corresponding more or less to the recently formed "Big Three" of British trade unionism. All these syndicates and groups are not officially part of the Socialist Party; they are more purely Labor organisations, whose aim it is to obtain better conditions for their members. Frequently, of course, their line of action is the same as that taken by the political Socialist Party. But in this instance the Confederation has declined to follow the advice of the Socialist leaders, who would like, no doubt, to have seen a national movement leading to the millennium of a Social Revolution.

North And South
It has long been predicted that as the result of the war the divisions which existed before 1914 between the North and the South of France would become accentuated. It was, indeed, bound to happen. The Southerner has a less hardy and less steady temperament than his Northern compatriot. He has been far away from the ravages of war, and has, indeed, more than once made known his discontent at having to fight and to pay for a war away up in the North. To them it was not nostra guerra. That difference has, perhaps, been underlined by the action of the miners of the North of France in declining to take common action with their fellow-workmen in the South. They have accepted the arrangement come to as the result of negotiations with Loucheur, and, although naturally protesting with vigor their complete solidarity with the South, they have nevertheless made the general miners' strike impossible.

With the miners, as with other working men, the high cost of living has been the chief economic cause of trouble, and, with few exceptions, the strikes are mainly economic in their origin, however much opportunity for political exploitation they may offer. The general public, both rich and poor, laboring and idle, is convinced that it is being shamelessly fleeced by speculators, not only in the necessities of existence, but also in the little luxuries of life. There have been one or two spurts of official activity against the food speculator, but there has never been anything like a proper control either of prices or, in spite of elaborate rationing of systems, of consumption.

Cost Of Living
The general cost of living in Paris today has very nearly reached, if it has not, with regard to some commodities, exceeded, the prices prevalent in England on the eve of the Revolution. It has recently been added to in a way calculated most surely to irritate the consumer. The finances of France may be sound, but it is quite certain that no broad financial policy has yet been evolved to deal with the financial aftermath of war. Instead, the French have been subjected to a series of extremely onerous and irritating imposts, which have nearly all of them had the effect of still further increasing the ordinary man's daily expenditure. The French working man,

India, The Philippines And Korea

A Comparison Of Conditions By A Traveler

By Alfred E. Pierce
(The Japan Advertiser)

Any reference to the recent outrages in Korea evokes from the Japanese press a protest that Japan is misrepresented, and that her offense is no worse than that of Great Britain in India, or America in the Philippines. No belief is attached to the saying that fault confessed is half redressed, nor does the vernacular press see the ability of a nation in admitting a wrong done, expressing contrition for it, and making suitable atonement. No, such a step would be too humiliating! It would not be out of place to briefly examine the "sins" laid at the door of Great Britain and America.

With a flourish of language worthy of a better cause attention is directed by the vernacular press to India, which is represented as groaning underneath the heel of a tyrannous conqueror, who does not scruple to ride rough-shod over the most elementary and fundamental rights of the inhabitants of that country. The writer was recently speaking to a Japanese gentleman, and received a surprising shock at his knowledge—or rather lack of it—in regard to the Middle-East. Supplementing his deficiency in English with a variety of theatrical gestures, he bewailed the fate of "glorious India," as he called her, and said he was "berry sorree" for me (although I am not an Indian). My reply, brief recapitulating the conditions in India today, made him open his eyes wide in astonishment. He averred that I was mistaken, but I soon assured him to the contrary. This incident is detailed merely to show how uninformed some people can be, and, when the Japanese press regales its readers and its readers with highly colored articles on the hideous torment to soul and body that India is subjected to at the hands of a heartless and conscienceless Britain, I am not surprised at the ignorance of the masses.

For the benefit of some Japanese I would point out that if they would only approach facts straightly and honestly, it will be manifest that Great Britain, in India, is earnest and sincere in developing self-government among the people of that region. This is not done merely by brilliant written, studious despatches from Downing Street, or proclamations to "our loyal and well-beloved subjects" from Buckingham Palace, but the ideal is carried out in practical action. Almost the entire legal department is manned by the indigenous inhabitants of that land. The same applies to the various other Government departments, whilst the majority of the members of the Civil Service are Indians, and no discrimination whatever, in remuneration or treatment, is exercised. Freedom of speech, of worship, of the press, freedom to live your own life securely and unmolested in the "Pearl of the East" of Great Britain in India. When the Indian orator, sometimes, at the street corner has his effusions punctuated with shouts of "Bande Mataram" (the Indian equivalent of the Korean "Mansu") no gentleman dressed in a light blue uniform and a defenseless civilian, neither does a platoon of soldiers turn the street corner into a shambles. Britain is wise, and knows that a little letting-off of steam is essential for the right working of the machine.

This is, then, the dreadful fate that India is undergoing. Of course, I do not say that British rule is perfection, but it tries to be just and fair, and all India recognises that. There are some deficiencies, but these pale into insignificance before the 6000 conferred and the security enjoyed. As for America's "heinous crimes" in the Philippines they do not differ much from those of Great Britain. America has even done more for the Philippines than Britain for the Indians, and self-government is not far from the reach of the people that the U.S.A. politically nurtured and bred. A visit to Manila and a short stay in the "Pearl of the Orient" will convince any unprejudiced person of this. This prosperity of the people, their content, their high moral, material and physical standards—all these proclaim, more eloquently than words can do, how the greatest democracy in the world, true to her ideals and pledged word, has nobly redeemed the trust reposed in her.

What are the secret talismans that these wonderful Anglo-Saxons possess? Principally, the love of Right—Right towards all men, irrespective of caste, color or creed; and a respect for the customs, religions and ancient civilisations of the races under their tutelage. In short, there is no attempt to discriminate, no attempt at denationalisation, no foolish attempts at blundering Anglicisation or Americanisation, or—to use a word so much in vogue amongst the Japanese today—assimilation; just a parental and anxious watchfulness that the grown-up children shall pursue each its national destiny aright without any undue hustling. Any of the big cities of India, or of Egypt, or of the P. I. will show the Anglo-Saxon's belief in broad-minded principles, in barriers of race, caste and religion flying under on all sides, whilst East and West mingle and commingle freely and voluntarily in the noblest of all noble tasks, the regeneration of a new world, of that golden era when man shall clasp in friendship and good-will the hand of his fellow-man, and East meet West in true brotherhood, despite Rudyard Kipling's words: Can a tithe of this be claimed for Korea?

Have these ideals been attained? Do not the recent disturbances in Bengal and the Punjab show the failure of British statesmanship in India? Not one bit. The disturbances in India were far smaller, and less far-reaching in their consequences, than those in England and Scotland, and were the natural corollaries, as they were in Britain, of the finish of a stupendous, exhausting war. During these disturbances, no dissatisfaction of any extraordinary growth was manifested against the occupation of India by the British, and the troubles were due, principally, to economic causes, which a few fanatic hot-heads seized to foment discord against established authority, to deluge India in Bolshevism, and blood and tears, even as Russia is today. The co-operation of the people in the reestablishment of harmony was the most effective rejoinder to the unsubstantiated statements abroad that India is tired of the British Raj who for so long kept the peace in the cockpit of Asia. As Lord Morley once remarked: "We need not flatter ourselves that we retain India by force; the moment India decides that our guidance is no longer necessary, that moment must we go." To imagine that amongst 300 millions of diverse peoples, in an age when all the world is agog with excitement at the new-fangled doctrines preached, none will make any disturbance is absurd. If India was self-governing or independent, and had been subjected to the strain of the recent war, the disturbances would still have occurred. The wonder really is that, with Bolshevism hovering on her borders, and the Afghan knocking at her gates, the disturbances were not on a more extensive or better organized scale, and this ceases to be a wonder when one remembers that the heart of India is sound and wise.

It is, of course, perfectly obvious that no alien form of Government, however good, can ever provide an entirely satisfactory substitute for an entirely indigenous one. Britain admits this, and the peoples of India recognise that British enterprise in India is only in the nature of a "missionary" effort, and all the world realises that in the very near future India will take her rightful place, in pride and glory, beside Australia, Canada and the Union of South Africa. In the Philippines, America has almost considered her task over, and thinks she can leave the Philippines safely to the arbiters of their own national destiny.

When one turns to Korea, what a contrast is presented! Japan accepted a phase of Western civilisation boldly, but in not accepting along with Western materialism she has important Western idealism she has not exchanged the substance for the shadow, with results that, probably, none deplores more than she does, and which, if not speedily remedied, may spell her doom as a colonising Power of any magnitude.

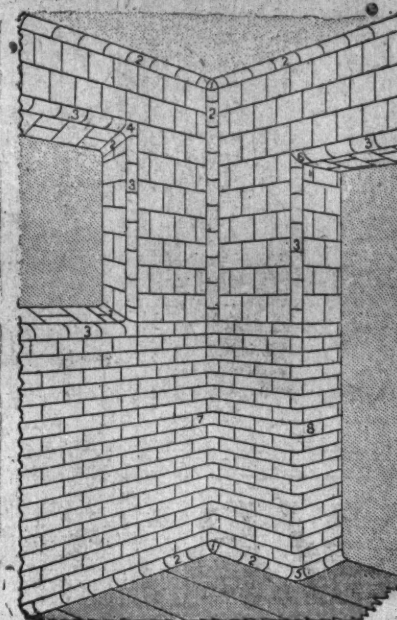

who now has to pay double the price he had to pay a few weeks ago for cigarettes and tobacco, feels rather aggrieved when he is told that the excess war profits tax produced an immensely larger sum in Great Britain than it did in France. When he hears of the British income-tax he, as the man who after all has to meet the great burden of the "consumption" taxes in France, naturally feels that the rich man goes more or less scot free, and that the poor man has to pay.

In addition to these many economic causes of unrest there is, of course, the general discontent aroused by the war and by the cleared perception by the laborer of his importance in the world's social fabric. Concessions to this feeling have been many. There is first of all the law governing the payment of rents, which is undoubtedly hard upon the property owner. There is the State subsidy to keep down the price of bread, and a number of other similar measures have been put into force with a view to keeping the workmen quiet. The most important of these measures has perhaps been the eight-hour day bill, which was passed by Parliament without a very searching criticism, and which in consequence has given rise to all material and immediately productive machinery into the country. The Government

The blame for the situation is not placed directly upon the shoulders of Clemenceau. The country hoped that he would win the war, and he has nobly redeemed his promise. It is not asked of him that he should also be the genius to preside over the settlement of the vast economic and social problems which are the outcome of the war. But there is nevertheless a growing feeling that the men he has gathered around him to study these questions are not quite big enough either in method or outlook. Clemenceau is credited by fable with having replied to one who made this observation to him by asking whether the Capital had been saved by eagles.

The strength of all these criticisms is felt more or less vaguely by Labor's remembering old grievances against Clemenceau, which the political Socialists have done their best to keep alive, for his methods of dealing with peace time strikes had no savor of rose water about them. Labor is not alone in desiring a change of Government, once Peace has been signed and there is some prospect of a return to the normal conditions of peace. There are many capitalists and certainly many of the middle and upper middle classes who would then welcome the creation of a government less warlike and supreme in its chief and less subordinate and inefficient in its rank and file.

The real need of the country for some time to come would, in fact, seem to be a Government of comparative honesty which would make it its concern, not to resume the great political battles which have so far been such a feature of the history of the Third Republic, but to content itself modestly, but fruitfully, with readjusting the social relations of Labor and Capital and restarting "business as usual after alterations and repairs." Any movement towards the creation of such a Government, or of a party and program which might bring it about in the approaching elections, would have the support of every class and in particular of the laboring classes, who have so far been scarcely touched by the growing campaign of Bolshevik tendency to which they are now subjected.

An Optimistic View Of Conditions In England

By Domino
"Distance lends enchantment," says the old proverb, but sometimes even proverbs are not quite correct. At a distance of some ten or eleven thousand miles from England the picture that one got of conditions in that country either from the papers or more often from the vivid imagination was presented in very dark colors and spread gloom around. I have just got back from a quick trip which gave me a little over a month in London, some nine days in New York, and eight days in San Francisco. Let me give the impressions that I retain of an enjoyable trip even though so many miles away from the spots mentioned.

In the first place things are not nearly as bad as they are painted. In fact after all the terrors I went through, wondering whether a sovereign would see me through a meager breakfast, wondering whether I would find a room anywhere in London, and if I found one whether I could afford to pay for it; wondering whether I would ever again experience the joys of riding in a taxi, I was agreeably surprised. I not only found that all meals could be got, as nicely served and as dainty as you required, at fairly reasonable prices, but that even comfortable hotels would not drive you away with "Full up" ringing in your ears but would rather supply you with bedroom and bath at something like a couple of dollars a day or say half a sovereign. The Cranston Hotels were even more reasonable and for about seven shillings a day would not only sleep you and bathe you but would also give you quite a nice breakfast with which to face the day.

Any reader of history will know that after every big struggle a period of unrest has always followed. It is in the order of things. With the peace there is bound to be some of the impatient ones who expect an immediate utopia. So it has been with some of the gallant fellows who have fought so well and have wanted to get back home again. So it has been with the discharged warrior who would wish to step into his former job right away and, with a feeling of natural pride in having done his duty, expect easier hours and more pay. But all things want adjusting and one of the remarkable things in England at the present time, as far as the onlooker could see, is the mighty endeavors of the statesmen to settle things for the ultimate good.

It is also wonderful to see the way in which the majority of people take the things that are bound to follow a war: the inevitable unemployment, the high price of everything, the profiteering, and all the other evils that can be readily called to mind. There is a feeling that there is a good time coming for us all, and it may take time and if it does then we can at least enjoy ourselves by a good grumble. A good instance of what is felt occurred upon the Royal George on its trip across the Atlantic when it carried over a thousand troops back to Canada. One young fellow, who had done all sorts of gallant deeds when faced by the enemy, growled at everything and everybody connected with the Old Country. A Continental who happened to be by happened to say that England did not treat her soldiers well. The poor fellow only wanted to be polite and agree with our dear young British grumbler, but he got an awful surprise. "Tommy the Grumbler" asked him what he meant, and told him very forcibly that England was a damn good place and if anyone said anything about it he would make them eat their words and what is more if England wanted him tomorrow he would go back again, and if I grumble you needn't be so there. What our young Continental friend to think. Here we are always grumbling about something or other and deep down ready to accept what is necessary to bring about the happiness of all.

I read that railway strikes were paralyzing the work of the country and yet lots of us were traveling over the affected lines in the greatest comfort and well up to time. The fares by the way are really stiff. You see that to "Some-where" it is one pound. You give the pound and then the clerk tells you quite politely that another ten shillings will be required since the tax on railway tickets is fifty percent. But food, rooms, taxis, theaters, in fact most things, are not nearly so bad as we imagine and England is "All Right."

Both at New York and San Francisco things struck me as fairly normal. The fellows who are getting back are settling into jobs and seem from what one hears to be glad not only to get back to civil life but also to have had the experience of serving with the colors. People are talking a good deal about Shantung. Most of them have not the faintest idea just where it is but they have an idea that a crooked deal has been done and that China has been pretty badly left so they are up in arms and sympathy for this Far Eastern home of ours is being given out with both hands. And just as readily as they give sympathy to China so readily do they make the most awful faces and use the most awful swear words when talking about Japan. It is all Japan's fault, they say, and it is just as well that the Japanese knows that somehow or other he has got the world up against him. The feeling in America, especially in the West, is extremely bitter. Shantung is the talk in the trains, in the hotels, in the streets, in the cars and in the theater intervals. No, the Japanese are not at all popular now. What are they going to do about it?

assistance of Allied merchants and manufacturers. It seemed to be imagined that France would be able without handicapping herself in the race for the world's peace commerce and industry to turn all her attention to re-equipping her factories with machines made by her own engineering firms from steel and iron produced by her own furnaces.

The natural desire of the French to enable their own devastated industries to recover from the shock of war was in the opinion of many Frenchmen, carried too far, and even now, when many of the import restrictions have given way to fresh duties, there are many who feel that enough has not yet been done to encourage the introduction of raw

China Political Notes

From Chinese Press

Negotiations are concluded over the purchase by the Ministry of the Navy from Italian merchants of 100 submarines at a price of 30,000,000 francs. Admiral Liu Kwan-hsiui, the Minister, was instrumental in concluding the transaction. The agreement is being drafted. The Ministry of War is also contemplating the purchase of 100 aeroplanes from Great Britain.

General Ni Shih-chung, Tsuchun of Anhui, has arrived in Tientsin, said to be there to consult physicians.

Mr. Kung Hsin-chun is determined to resign from his premiership. The President and General Tuan Chi-jui both consider it unnecessary to ask him to remain again. General Tien Wen-li, the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, is being approached to act as Premier, but Tien has not yet consented.

The conflict between students and police in Tientsin has been settled. The students have all resumed their work and the place is quiet. For the assault upon certain Japanese, the officials have expressed regret to the Japanese Consul-General. The incident is regarded as closed.

General Tan Hao-ming has arrived in Canton and is to be contesting for a post with Tsuchun Mr. Yung-shui. A great development is pending. Troops have been increased to the alarm of the people. The surplus revenue of salt gabelle during August amounting to Tls. 2,600,000 is expected to be released today in full.

General Yen Hsi-shan, Tsuchun of Shansi, has recommended the decoration of Dr. Thwing of the International Reform Bureau for his efforts in carrying out the anti-opium campaign in China.
